BAILROAD COMPANIES CONTRACT FOR FOREIGN LABOR.

Delivered at Castle Garden Under an Agreement that They Work at $1.30 a Day-Luigi Troje Reveals More Than He Intended—Mr. Ford's Committee Digging

The Congressional Committee, which is investigating the abuses of forced and assisted immigration into this country and the foreign ract labor system, resumed its work at the Westminster Hotel to-day. Chairman Ford and Congressman Guenther were present, Congressmen Oates, Morrow and Spinols being detained at Wash-row and Spinola being detained at Washington.

Luigi Troje was called as the first witness. He is an Italian, speaking very little English. Interpreter Boucher was not present, and Chairman Ford requested Prof. Marcosi to act as interpreter till Mr. Boucher came.

Prof. Morosai declined with some asperity, accompanying his declination with the assertion that Mr. Boucher had not properly and fairly interpreted the testimony of former Italian witnesses.

He would say nothing more, and the committeemen paid no attention to him.

Henry W. O. Edye, of the Compagnie Nationale de Navigation, was sworn. He testified regarding the emigrant traffic on his line of st-amers, which ply between New York and Marseilles.

His sompany brought 1,276 emigrants over and Marseilles.

His company brought 1,276 emigrants over in 1888, 7,428 in 1887, and for the first six months of this year 6,100.
Mr. Edys could not account for the remarkable increase this year, except that the people of Europe had absurd notions of the condition of labor in America.
His company has account in most European condition of labor in America.

His company has agents in most European cities, but he knew nothing of their methods.

His company had been fined for overcrowding its vessels.

Luigi Troje next testified. He said he was a money changer at 115 and 114 First avenue.

He simply exchanged Italian money for American money, or vice versa. He hastened to explain that he was not obliged to be in business at all, as his wife was a midwife, waking plenty of money.

business at all, as his wife was a midwife, making plenty of money.

He used to be in the fancy-box business. Hed been in America four years ago. He denied that he had ever engaged in the business of contracting for laborers until a few days ago, when two men came to him to look for laborers. They wanted 500 men for railroad work in the country.

are, when two men came to him to look for laborers. They wanted 500 men for railroad work in the country.

They offered $1.20 a day and a railroad taket from New York to the place of work. The men would have to pay nothing for lodging. They would be paid once a month. The gentlemen showed Troje a letter written in English and told him it was a proposition to the railroad company to furnish 500 men according to this plan. Troje signed it and the gentlemen took it away.

Troje said he expected to find the laborers about the streets. He understood that he was to make an account of the food eaten by his men and the company was to pay him for it.

The gentleman had an interpreter named Seega. He said they wanted all fresh men and I agreed to furnish them. There was nothing said about Castle Garden, though, nothing said about Castle Garden, though, and I did not agree to get the men from Italy."

Thus testified Troje over and over again, and despite the caution of Chairman Ford that he was under cath. He denied, too, that he had agreed to pay to the gentleman per cent. of the money received for boarding the men.

Then the document itself was shown to the witness and he recognized it, completely dumfounded.

It was addressed to Philip Smith, esq., and agreed to furnish three or four hundred men from Italy at Castle Garden by Oct. 1, the men to labor for the railroad company at $1.20 a day. He agreed to pay to the contractor 5 per cent of the money received for boarding the men.

Joseph Seca, next called to the stand, said his business was furnishing laborers to railroad companies. He lives at 426 East One Hundred and Thirteenth street—Little Italy. He had furnished men to contractors for the past six years.

He had furnished men to contractors for the past six years.

His profit was in boarding the men, on their transportation and for getting them work. He denied that he had ever imported any men from Italy.

The average pay to the men is $1.35 a day.
He denied that he had ever been a partner with Troje, but said he would like to be, as he is an honest man.

Sica related that Troje called on him the other night and they went together to the Continental Hotel to see Philip Smith.

Smith told them that his railroad company, which ran to a coal mine, wanted men. The Continental Hotel to see Philip Smith.

Smith told them that his railroad company, which ran to a coal mine, wanted men. The company would pay the fares to the place of work, and Sica told him he would furnish the men for $1.25 a day and board. Smith did not want to pay so much, and the price was finally fixed at $1.20.

As Sica had no money Smith agreed to fix it so he could buy provisions on thirty days' credit, and for this favor Sica agreed to pay Smith 5 per cent, of the board bill.

Mr. Smith wanted fresh men from Italy, as those who had been in New York a little while were not so casy to handle. So Sica told him it would take six weeks, but he should have the men if the company decided to make the contract.

to make the contract.

The witness has furnished three or four hundred men to Brown, Howard & Co., the Aqueduct contractors, from which Sica deducted for the board of the men. He charged a profit of about one cent on every pound of provisions used.

Sica furnished 1,500 men to the West Shore Railroad Company, and the men made him a present of $1 apiece after they had been at work some time. He is from Salermo, in Southern Italy, and most of his men are mountaineers from the same locality. Every two months the men used to send him some money.

George H. Simmons, the next witness, is a special agent of the Government Secret Service. He confessed that he had passed under other names at times and recalled that he was Philip Smith last week and called on Joseph Sica in Little Italy to contract for men to open up a rich vein of ore in Pennselvania.

men to open up a rich vein of ore in Pennsylvania.

"I called on several Italipn bankers in Little Italy," said the witness. "I found Mr. Trojs and he said he could furnish me all the men I wanted. He wanted to see his partner and would call on me at the Continental Hotel in the evening.

"He introduced Sica as his brother-inlaw and business partner. I told Troje that we wanted fresh Italians delivered at Castle Gardeu, so that we could take them direct to the Hocking Valley mines. Both men said they could and would furnish the men.

In short, if Mr. Simmons tells the truth, both Troje and Sica perjured themselves clear through their testimeny.

"It seems to me," he reports, "to prove excellent management that, in a ward which contained eighty persons, the disease could have been so controlled and so few cases have appeared."

He reports that the food served the patients is wholesome and dealt out in sufficient quantities, and that the reported filthiness of the wards is entirely without foundation.

Regarding the allegations that potatoes were not served to the inmates of the asylum, Supt. Smith states that for a few days in the early part of July vegetables were not served because good ones could not be procured. An excellent substitute was given them in beans.

MISS DONOVAN SAVED HIS LIFE.

C. H. Brigham Rescued from Drowning by n Boston Heroine.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVERING WORLD. Boston, Aug. 6.—Yesterday Miss Hannah Donovan, a sister-in-law of J. F. Callahan, of this city, heroically rescued a young man from drowning at Nantasket Beach.

C. H. Brigham, who is in the law office of Congressman Ranney on Court street, visited Nantasket, and during the morning hours in-Nantasket, and during the morning hours indulged several times in an ocean bath. About 12 o'clock he was in the water, between Gun Rock and Green Hill, when he espied two of his friends in a boat at some distance from shore. Thinking to join them, Brigham struck out for the boat.

He overestimated his strength, however, and when within twenty feet of his friends he sank beneath the waves. When he came to the surface those in the boat called out to him, but received no reply, as he immediately sank a second time.

Miss Docovan was sitting on the piazza of a cottage within a short distance of the water's edge, saw Brigham's peril, and at once went to his assistance, dressed as she was in house costume. She swam quickly to the spot where Brigham had gone down for the third time. Miss Donovan dived beneath the water and caught the drowning man, drawing him to the surface.

Brigham's friends then came to her assistance, and the almost lifeless body was finally brought ashore, and the brave young lady, rushing to the cottage, procured some brandy, by the sid of which Brigham was rapidly resuscitated.
